

Clare Daniel
SGS Economics & Planning

Biography

Claire Daniel is a planner, programmer and analyst with experience across local government and consulting roles working with SGS Economics and Planning in Sydney. Holding a rare combination of qualifications in both planning and computing, Claire sees an urgent need to get to grips with the opportunities and challenges presented by digital technology, and it's potential to transform the planning profession. With this in mind, Claire has recently commenced her PhD at the UNSW City Futures Research Centre as a Scientia Scholar in order to undertake substantial research to help the profession navigate this transition.
