

Paul Burton

Cities Research Institute, Griffith University

Biography

Paul Burton worked for many years at the School for Advanced Urban Studies, University of Bristol, UK researching UK and European urban policy initiatives, on behalf of UK central government departments, Directorates of the European Union and of major national and international charities. Since moving to Australia in 2007, he has researched Australian urban policy development and the emergence of other place-based policies, as a member of the Urban Research Program and now the Cities Research Institute at Griffith University.